PERSONALITY IN PROFESSORS

Probably nearly every one will admit that the spot where our educational institutions have suffered most deterioration from vital personalities is at the heart of them—in the colleges of liberal arts. Among the various reasons which may be brought forward to account for this decline, two stand out conspicuously: First, administrators during the past generation have directed a large proportion of their energy and their funds toward advancing the graduate and professional schools. Inevitably, the attraction of pecuniary reward and scholarly distinction has drawn the more ambitious men into professional research rather than teaching effectiveness is the desideratum. President's protest that the exceptional undergraduate teacher is as precious to them as the exceptional researcher; but they open their purse strings to the investigator; and every one who hears university club gossip is familiar with the contemptuous, "He's well enough for an undergraduate teacher." The second reason for the decline is that the attendance at the universities has multiplied faster than the endowments. As a consequence, vast classes of 500 to 1000 are vaguely lectured at by wholesale, or cut up into small sections, and turned over to a battalion of teaching assistants and instructors, who are not infrequently far below the level of the average high-school teacher in personality and in general intelligence. Between the graduate school above, with its emphasis upon investigation, and the "slave-labor" below, with its characterless semi-tutorial function, the high calling of the teacher is left to somewhat weak-kneed Laodiceans. Drop "Old Wells" among them, and they would retreat like rabbits from the presence of a man. The protest against these conditions is certain to increase; for though the administrative watchword may be "the advancement of science," the rank and file of the alumni continue to demand "the formation of character."—Evening Post.

NEW SCHOOLS GO UP ON KAUAI

Twenty-four additions and two new school buildings are being erected on the island of Kauai and will be ready for occupancy when the fall term opens next month, according to a letter received by Inspector Gibson this morning from Supervising Principal H. H. Brodie, who spoke very optimistically regarding Kauai's new school accommodations.

At Hanapepe, in the district of Waimea, a $20,000 ten-room building is being erected to replace the old building, which is to be torn down. On account of the supervisors cutting down the original appropriation, it was necessary to abandon the project of constructing the building with concrete and to change the specifications for a frame structure.

Two new teachers' cottages are being constructed at Hanapepe, together with an extra kitchen for the assistant teachers. These cottages will accommodate the additional teachers for the island, of which there are twenty-three.

Twenty-four one-room additions to the old schools are being built; in some instances there are two or three rooms added on to the old building. There are now sixteen schools on Kauai, including the new building at Hanapepe and the schoolhouse being constructed at Waiialua river for a new district.

The new one-room additions are partially exposed to the open air, the walls extending high enough to accommodate the blackboards. These additions have been made necessary by the increased school attendance, there being five hundred more enrolled than last year.

"Kauai has an excellent public school system of buildings," said Inspector Gibson this morning, "which is due to the fact that the Garden Island has a very intelligent board of supervisors."

MID-PACIFIC GETS WIDE RECOGNITION

The Mid-Pacific Magazine has been recognized by the Australian government as an official promotion journal for the Pacific, and not only that but the newswriters of the big island continent are now clamoring for the Hawaiian publication, one newswriter in Melbourne sending a monthly order by the last mail for 550 Mid-Pacifics, every month, so great is the demand since the art supplement has been added. This will be a permanent feature of the Mid-Pacific from now on. The September number of the Mid-Pacific is now on the news stands, and its art supplement of photos of women of the Pacific is a most interesting feature. Many of the types are Hawaiian, and all are picturesque and worth framing or sending away to friends. In the literary section there is one of Louie's inimitable south sea island stories and a pictorial description of how the Fathe Pierce took the motion picture film of surfing at Waikiki. There are also pictures and stories from all around the Pacific. Get the September Mid-Pacific and send it away. It will bring people to Hawaii.

TESTING THEIR OWN MINDS

Many people who feel that their minds are becoming deranged would be glad to have themselves examined, just as for any other disease, with no publicity. In Maryland, Rhode Island, New Jersey and Illinois laws have been passed allowing such persons to take steps for the testing of their own minds. These statutes have been found a great blessing to many people, who, under the laws of most states, would have been obliged to wait until quite insane before treatment. In most cases these self-committed persons have voluntarily gone to hospitals and the state thus saved expense, and the families spared great worry and humiliation. Farm and Fireside.
